

LOST RIVER, WV

The picture gives you the idea. It's a bit of a hike on foot to get to that exact spot; we may or may not get there, but the point is that this is a remote, stunningly beautiful, largely undeveloped corner of the state. Riding in this area is always a treat, and the roads leading there and back have been chosen for pure motorcycling joy.

We can ride a 17 mile stretch that features no traffic, no cross roads, and only a few farms as the very curvy road climbs and descends several small mountains. Or we could just ride a random route, shooting turns at will. In reality, there are no bad roads! At the end ...lunch time!

We have reserved a private country house with 3 bedrooms and 2 full baths so everyone can be comfortable; a bonus after the 200 mile back roads journey from home. Saturday is up for grabs: sleep in and rest, explore the environs, or ride an unplanned route to nowhere or to one of several interesting spots. On Sunday we get an early start for the journey home, using an alternate but equally interesting route. We will look for serendipitous distractions along the way and arrive home before dark for a celebratory meal where we can enjoy an adult beverage or three, recount our weekend's adventure, and lie about how fast we rode.
